WIDE-AWAKE POSTER.
Children of the World.
Clasista in the forest.
Mongers the shadows cool.
Coyly gazing on their charms.
Mirrored in the pool.
By the laughing brooklets side.
As if wing the wind.
With a grace ineffable.
Grow the spicy ferns.

How I love their pungent smell—
Aromatic fine—
Bracing to the weary sense
As a tonic wine.
With their spicy fragrances
Eye and fancy loom.
Featherly as the fairy wings
Of Titania's crew.

Delicate, ethereal.
Yet with sturdy strength
Perfuming in their zest
To live, until at length
Of the summer dream.
And the blue-eyed gentian droops
Low her stricken head.

When the softly falling snow
Hides each dainty form
Of these children of the woods.
With their soft, white, downy
Jack Frost comes with magic touch
To bring them back again.
Riching with his diamond point
Upon the pine.

Louisa C. Poole, in Boston Transcript.

The Song in the Dell.
I know a way
Of hearing what the larks and linets
say:
The larks tell of the sunbaths and the
larks:
The linets from the hedges make reply:
And boast of hidden nests with mocking lay.

I know a way
Of keeping near the rabbits at their play:
They tell me of the cool and shady
green:
Where waterfalls disturb the placid
brook.

That I may go and frolic in the spray,
Of catching dewdrops on a night in May,
And threading them upon a spear of
green.

That through their sides translucent
may be seen
The sparkling dew that emeralds display.

I know a way
Of trapping sunbeams as they nimbly
fly:
At dusk-and-weak with meadow-grass
and flowers,
And holding them in store for dreary
hours.

When winds are chill and all the sky is gray.

I know a way
Of stealing fragrance from the new-
mown hay:
And storing it in flasks of petals
made,
To give the air when all the flowers
fade.

And leave the woodland world to sad
decay.

I know a way
Of coaxing snowflakes in their flight to stay:
So a while that, as they hang in
air,
I weave them into frosty lace to wear
About my head upon a sultry day.
—Charles Edward Carry.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE-AWAKES.

It was just 15 years ago today that there began one of the most interesting trials in the history of this country—that of Aaron Burr for treason, in 1807.

Although it was not proved that the former esteemed politician had planned to conquer Mexico and form a new government with that country and a new emperor by the name of Aaron Burr.

That was because treason is held in such contempt by all men.

What a terrible thing it is to be a traitor! To betray the confidence of others! No country could remain very long in existence if there were many traitors among its members, for all governments are founded on loyalty and trust.

But I want you to agree to tell me a thing until you are quite sure it is true. Now, run off and play.

Catching a Woodchuck.

Dear Uncle Jed: One Friday afternoon when we were hoeing the strawberries we heard a noise. So we went to see what he was after. So we brother Bill said, "Go home and get the other dog." After I had brought the dog home he began to bark on the side of the wall and began to bark on the other dog stayed there. So we began to take the stone wall down. In the middle of the wall there was a big rock and the little dog whose name was Jack, began to dig under the rock and the little dog tried to get under the rock to get the woodchuck out. Then I dug a little bit more and got under the rock and got the woodchuck by the head and pulled it out of the hole and we killed it and threw it into a small tin. Then we took the dog and went home.
